1. Mission. The Air Force Information Warfare Center (AFIWC):

1.1. Explores, applies, and migrates offensive and defensive information warfare (IW) capabilities for operations, acquisition, and testing.

1.2. Provides advanced IW training for the United States Air Force.

2. Command. AFIWC, located at Kelly Air Force Base, TX, is a subordinate unit of the Air Intelligence Agency (AIA). AIA is a field operating agency subordinate to the HQ USAF, Director of Intelligence, Surveillance, and Reconnaissance.

3. Responsibilities. The AFIWC provides various IW services to a full range of Air Force activities and a wide variety of Army, Navy, Marine, Joint organizations, and US agencies. The center:

3.1. Provides IW products and services to the Air Force, other services, Department of Defense (DoD) components, and US government agencies in direct response to stated requirements.

3.2. Acts as time-sensitive, single focal point for electronic warfare and command and control warfare services.

3.3. Is the Air Force focal point for tactical deception and operation security training.

3.4. Is a multiservice organization with Army, Navy, Marine, and National Security Agency participation. AFIWC continues a steady growth with personnel from these organizations. The center also continues to expand participation with other US agencies.

3.5. Communicates with supported commands, Air Force organizations, other services, and US agencies on matters of direct operational impact to its mission areas and responsibilities.
